The Giants made a clean job of it yesterday in defeating the Brooklyns, and needed the victory to hold their advantage over the troublesome Phillies. The latter played two games with the Bostons. They won the first and tied the second, only one run being scored in nineteen innings. an unusual display of pitching skill. The Pittsburgs cut loose and smothered the tallenders twice, and the Cubs dropped the liner, pronging it with one hand as a same to the Reds, who are crawling he was heading for the wall. The score up on the Brooklyns.

The Giants were very chipper yesterday in the mist which hung over the valley of the Harlem and brightened a dark, damp afternoon with tip top ball play-They shut out the Brooklyns, 5 to e, having pepper, good batting, good fielding and good pitching. They looked more like themselves than they have for some days, their tactics being executed in cleancut and timely style. It was a dismal, shivery day for spectators, but down in the moist laden swale the action on the Giants' part was quite the reverse of the Umpire Brennan called the game in the eighth on account of darkness. The light was pretty bad. Bill Dahlen made a mild protest when the umpire called the game, but was informed by Brennan that Daubert had requested him to call it. It was just as well. as the field was wet and rain began to fall a few minutes later.

Demaree was a complete puzzle to the Dodgers, their quartet of singles being sprinkled futilely over an expanse of five innings, which thin layer of woodwork didn't come anywhere near a run, espe-cially as the Giants made some good plays in picking off men on the bases around some in the dewy gorse, but nevrtheless accepted every chance with alac-

Seven of their nine hits were useful. There was generally somebody on hand to respond to the call of opportunity, and on the whole the team played as if experiencing an awakening. Meyers and Herzog were most industrious in the run making operations, and they had help from Murray, Snodgrass, Doyle and Merkle. George Burns again went hitless in his lower berth. Demaree as a batter was a great pitcher. He fanned three times, every chance he had, and Rucker might have chance he had, and Rucker might have struck out twenty-seven men if Demarce had done all the batting for the Giants.

The leaders siammed several hits against the right field wall and had a fondness for driving to right. Doyle launched a double to the boundary in the first inning, but at the time the Giants hadn't emerged from the dark ages and didn't reach the renaissance period until

Herzog began the home second with smash of thermal speed through Rucker a smash of thermal speed through Rucker and reached first on a close decision. He stole second on the instant and capered to third when Red Murray bunted. It may be that Rucker couldn't move fast over the hydrated landscape, but anyway when he reached first to take Daubert's throw Murray also was there. Meyers crashed a single to right, sending Herzog home and Murray to third. While Rucker was thereing Merkle out Murray secret

Four times the first Brooklynite up reached first and either pined away for want of assistance or was caught further along the journey. After Fisher had singled in the third he and Fischer were eclipsed in unison on a play which may be called a fast double play since there are no slow ones. Moran opened with a are no slow ones. Moran opened with a single in the fourth, advanced to second on a steal after Cutshaw and Stengel had flied out and remained there until Collins had flied out.

Chief Meyers's hits fitted in nicely in New York's scoring. After Murray had been passed in the fourth the Chief sinbeen passed in the fourth the Chief singled to right on the hit and run and expressed Murray to third. Murray scored on Merkle's fly to Stengel, whose throw in was wide. Snodgrass sent a fly steepling to the right foul line in the fifth which neither Daubert nor Moran could reach. It fell just inside the line between them and netted two bases. Doyle outfooted a hit to short and stole second, but as Fletcher and Burns both struck out there were disturbing symptoms that Brooklyn's busiest innings were the sixth and seventh. Fischer's single opened the sixth. Rucker flied to Doyle and Moran lifted a fly back of second. Snodgrass made a worthy try, but slipped and struck his head on the ground. He was jarred, but threw to second before Fischer could get there. Moran tried to go from first to third on Fletcher's miss of Cutshaw's grounder and was thrown out by Burns.

-Darkness Ends Second in Tenth. Boston, Sept. 5.—At the end of nine-teen innings only one run had been scored in to-day's Boston-Philadelphia double header. This was in the first game, which went to the visitors, 1 to 0. The second contest was called on account of darkness at the end of the tenth, without either side having crossed the plate. An error by Maranville in the fourth inning of the first pitchers' battle gave Philadelphia the victory. He made a wild throw when there were two men on bases and none out, allowing Cravath to reach first. Then, after Luderus had fanned, an infield out enabled Paskert to score only run of the day. FORD HARD LUCK VICTIM

Only Run of Final Setto Comes After Hartzell's Error in Last Round.

American League battling yesterday was close for the most part, and the New Yorks lost two games in Washington, each by a one run margin. The peerless Johnson returned to life and shut them out in the second. The Red Sox laid the Athletics low again, and the Naps made a gain by wasteling a victory from the Degain by snatching a victory from the De-troits. One run was sufficient for the White Sox to beat the Browns.

Scores Three Runs After Two Are Down in Ninth.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 5.—The Naps gained a full game on the Athletics by a thrilling 7 to 6 victory this afternoon over the Detroit Tigers and are now only six and a half games away from the lead. The Naps had to overcome what seemed to be a hopeless handicap in order to win. Errors and bad pitching gave the Tigers an early lead, and when the last half of the ninth was started Detroit led 6 to 4. Jackson walked, but Lajoic hit into a double play and all hope seemed dead. Johnston tripled and scored on a passed ball. Turner was safe on Tutweiler's error and Dauss, who had relieved Willett, walked Graney. Singles by O'Neill and Blanding then sent over the two winning runs. The score:

Meanwhile Stallings and his men. having wrested fifth place from the Dodgers, are playing their heads off to remain in that notch, while the Red Sox, also travelling at a faster gait than early in the eager to snatch fourth place from the White Sox.

When Field Umpire Eason benched Manager McGraw in the first game at the Polo Grounds on Thursday it is said that the Giants' leader, looking in direction of the private box occupied by President Ebbets, made some comments of an uncomplimentary nature. Friends of Ebbets were positive in their state-ments yesterday that he had been hotly scored by McGraw, but Ebbets said, when asked about the matter, that even if Mc-asked about the matter, that even it Mc-Graw did, say anything deregatory he would take no notice of it. Ever since last year Ebbets and Mc-Graw have been bitter enemies. The trouble was caused by Ebbets's charge that the Giants were "yellow" when they sed to meet the Dodgers on a Satur-because of "wet grounds," although the Harlem diamond was dry enough to permit practice after the fans had been turned away. McGraw came back with a tirade which made the Brooklyn magnate boil within. Not at all strange, therefore, that the battles between the Giants and Dodgers are for real blood.

What is the matter with the Glants' This query is on the tip of the tongue wherever baseball is discussed these days. The answer is easy. McGraw's men can-not hit good pitching, while both Mar-quard and Mathewson have been showing below their usual effectiveness. Unless there is a big brace in the box and at the bat, the Giants may be forced into a neck and neck finish with the Philadel-phias. The Phillies, by the way, wind up the championship race with three games at the Polo Grounds on October 3 and 4. There would be a world of excitement if the ownership of the pen-nant and the right to meet the Athletics hinged upon the result of those contests

Mysterious Walker, the Brooklyn pitcher, did not break his finger on Wednesday. The digit simply was knocked out of joint. Walker wanted to remain in the box despite the injury. He is one of the most ambitious young men

Fletcher Tribute

"I'M stuck on the playing of Fletcher," said George Davis, former Giant and White Sox and a star in his day, yesterday at the Polo Grounds. "He's the best shortstop in the game to-day, in my opinion, valuable in every department. He covers a lot of ground, but what I especially, like about him is the way he goes after ground halls. He plays them in the right way and goes after them as if he knew he was going to get them."

Fred Clarke will be looking for a new third sacker before next season. Dooin of the Phillies declares that he didn't suggest the deal. Clarke voluntarily made the proposition, which Dooin snapped up with avidity.

Under the rules the Glants have five days in which to carry an appeal from Fresident Lynch's ruling in the forfeited game at Philadelphia last Saturday. Lynch handed down his verdict on Wednesday. The time limit expires on Monday. From present indications the Gants will let the matter rest in view of the known attitude of a majority of the
